ARGUED ON : 10.06.2026

DECIDED ON : 25/08/2026

JUDGMENT

P. Kumararatnam, J.

The above-named Accused-Appellants (hereinafter referred to as the Appellants) were indicted in the High Court of Puttalam as follows:

- On or about 03.10.2012, being in possession of a gun and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 22(1) read with Section 23(3) of the Firearms Ordinance No. 33 of 1916 as amended by Act No. 22 of 1996.

The trial commenced before the High Court Judge of Puttalam. The prosecution had called three witnesses and marked production P1 to P4 and closed the case. At that point, an application on behalf of the Appellants was made under Section 200(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No.15 of 1979. By order dated 03.08.2021, the learned High Court Judge had dismissed the said application and called for the defence. The Appellants gave evidence from witness box and called three witnesses on their behalf and closed their case.

After considering the evidence presented by both parties, the learned High Court Judge who heard the case at the High Court of Puttalam delivered the Judgement and had convicted the Appellants as charged and sentenced them to life imprisonment.

Being aggrieved by the aforesaid conviction and sentence, the Appellants preferred this appeal to this court.

The Learned Counsel for the Appellants informed this court that the Appellants have given consent to argue this matter in their absence. Also, at the time of argument the Appellants were connected via the Zoom platform from prison.

Background of the Case.

In this case the Appellants were arrested on 03.10. 2012. The arrest and the investigation were conducted by the officers attached to Unsolved Crimes Unit of Puttalam Police Station.

PW1, SI/Ranjith was the attached to Puttalam Police Station when the incident had happened. According to him, on the day of the incident as usual left the police station with 04 police officers to carryout in instigation pertains to unsolved crimes. They had positioned themselves at Seemavelliya Junction at about 4-4.50 hours. While stationed there, a motorbike with two people arrived there from the direction of Seemawelliya to Boraluvala and the police party had checked them. At that time light condition was very good. Although, there were no lamp post, sufficient light was available at that time.

Having seen a motorbike was approaching the T-junction from the direction of Manalgunduwa, PW3, 79592 Roshen was directed to stop the motor bike. The motorbike stopped about three meters before the junction and other officers who went with PW1 had surrounded the motorbike. The rider had threatened PW3 while he was getting down from the motorbike, but he was brought down under control using minimum force. A barrel of a gun was recovered from the rider's possession at the time of his arrest. He was named as the 1st Accused in the High Court case.

Thereafter, the pillion rider was searched and found a butt of a gun. He too arrested and named as the 2nd Accused in the High Court case.

PW2, PS 46076 Bandulasena was called to corroborate the evidence of PW1. Production has been sent to Government Analyst and according to the report, upon amalgamation, parts recovered from the Appellants consisted of a repeater shot gun made in the United States of America.

The Appellants had filed the following grounds of appeal:

1. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the prosecution failed to prove the charge on the indictment beyond reasonable doubt.
2. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the indictment was not in conformity with law and therefore, the Appellants had suffered a grave miscarriage of justice.
3. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the prosecution had failed to prove the ingredients of an offence under Section 22 of the Firearms Ordinance and specifically, that this situation is not that falls within the ambit of Section 22(1).
4. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that by concluding that the Appellants had not been misled by the offence not being specifically stated after having observed that such misstatement is defective, has denied the Appellants' right to a fair trial and is contrary to Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No.15 of 1979.

5. That the learned High Court Judge failed to properly evaluate the evidence led at the trial.
6. That the learned High Court Judge failed to properly evaluate the evidence of the Appellants under oath led at the trial.
7. That the judgment is contrary to Section 283 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979.
8. That the learned High Court Judge has misdirected herself with regard to the consistency and probability of the prosecution case.
9. That the learned High Court Judge failed to properly evaluate the inconsistencies and contradictions raised by the evidence of PW1 and PW2
10. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that 'possession' of a gun cannot lead to a sentence of life imprisonment.
11. That the learned High Court Judge's dismissal of the Appellants Evidence on the basis that they had not mentioned 'Hakeem' in their statements to the police even though they had, is incorrect.
12. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that in a case such as the present one, the prosecution has to prove 'sole' and exclusive possession' and the prosecution has failed to do so in this case.
13. The learned High Court Judge misdirected herself as to the burden of proof by stating that the Appellants are the only people who can offer explanation pertaining to the gun.
14. The judgement of the learned High Court Judge is contrary to the evidence that was lead at the trial.
15. That the learned High Court Judge imposed on the Appellants a burden of proof not required by law.
16. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate the omissions and contradictions in the notes and other observations related to the raid.

17. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the reasonable doubt as to the place and time of arrest is material to this case and that the benefit of such doubt should be afforded of the Appellants.
18. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the Suspicion created by the failure to properly submit the productions to the Magistrate, should be afforded to the Appellants.
19. That the learned High Court Judge failed to appreciate that the Prosecution had failed to disprove or affect the credibility of the defence Evidence.

As the appeal grounds are interconnected, all grounds will be considered together hereinafter.

The learned President's Counsel has strenuously argued that that the evidence given by PW1 and PW2 contradict with regard to the direction the motorbike arrived to the T-junction. According to PW1 the Accused persons arrived to the junction from the direction of Seemavelliya to Boraluwala. But according to PW2, the motorbike had come from the direction of Seemavelliya to Boraluwala. As per the sketch submitted at the commencement of the argument with the copy to the State, the evidence given by PW1 in respect of the arrival direction of the motorbike totally goes to the opposite direction of the evidence given by PW2.

A vital inter se contradiction—an irreconcilable discrepancy between the testimonies of two or more prosecution witnesses on a core material fact—destroys the foundational credibility of that evidence, forcing the court to resolve the resulting reasonable doubt in favor of the accused.

Unlike minor or trivial discrepancies born of normal human memory lapses, a vital contradiction goes to the root of the matter, rendering the tainted portions or the entire testimony unworthy of belief. Courts carefully separate foundational conflicts from trifling variations in language or minor details that do not touch the core matrix of the crime.

The inter se contradictions become more serious as the prosecution had failed to call an essential witness who was directed to stop the motorbike in which the Appellants arrived. According to learned President's Counsel, PC 79592 Rosean was the person who stopped the motorbike clad in police uniform and with possession of a T56 gun. According to PW2, when PC Rosean stopped the motorbike, 1st Appellant had had intimidated him and the police used reasonable force to subdue him before his arrest. This was not elicited from the evidence of PW1.

In The Attorney General v. Sandanam Pitchai Mary Theresa [2011] 2 SLR 292 the court held that:

“Whilst internal contradictions or discrepancies would ordinarily affect the trustworthiness of the witness statement, it is well established that the Court must exercise its judgment on the nature of the inconsistency or contradiction and whether they are true material to the facts in issue”.

Further, PC Rosean is an essential witness in order to prove the place of arrest and how the Appellant were arrested. The defence had suggested to both PW1 and PW2 that the Appellants were not arrested as suggested by the prosecution but were arrested elsewhere.

Individuals including police officers whose firsthand knowledge, professional expertise, or direct observations are critical for the court to establish facts, reconstruct events, and determine the guilt or innocence of the accused.

When a party in a criminal trial fails to call an essential witness, the court may draw an adverse inference that the missing testimony would have been unfavourable to that party, potentially weakening their case or creating a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt.

In Walimunige John v. The State 76 NLR 488, it was held:

“that the prosecution is not bound to call all the witnesses whose names appear on the back of the indictment or to tender them for cross-examination. Further, it is not incumbent on the trial Judge to direct the jury, save in exceptional circumstances, that they may draw a presumption under section 114 (f) of the Evidence Ordinance adverse to the prosecution from its failure to call one or more of its witnesses at the trial without calling all.

The question of a presumption arises only where a witness whose evidence is necessary to unfold the narrative is withheld by the ' prosecution and the failure to call such witness constitutes a vital missing link in the prosecution case and where the reasonable inference to be drawn from the omission to call the witness is that he would, if called, not have supported the prosecution. But where one witness's evidence is cumulative of the other and would be a mere repetition of the narrative, it would be wrong to direct a jury that the failure to call such witness gives rise to a presumption under section 114 (f) of the Evidence Ordinance."

In Republic of Sri Lanka v Udugamage Jayaratne CA/HCC/0236/2019 dated 31.03.2021 the court held;

“that the presumption of possession under Section 31 of the Firearms Ordinance only applies if the court believes the evidence regarding the recovery of the firearm. Given the appellant's total denial and the inconsistencies in the police testimony regarding the date of arrest and the recovery process, the court found the prosecution's version unreliable. The prosecution failed to produce the bag allegedly containing the weapon and failed to call available witnesses who were in police custody at the time of the alleged recovery.

The court also noted that the police witnesses were not truthful about the date of the appellant's arrest, which went to the root of the prosecution's case. The court emphasized that the prosecution has a duty to divulge the full truth and not suppress facts”.

As the place of incident was challenged by the defence, I consider the calling PW3 Rasean is very essential in this case. The learned High Court Judge ought to have considered this suppression in favour of the Appellants.

In this case, when the defence was called, both Appellants opted to give evidence from witness box.

In the evidence of 1st Appellant stated that he is a mechanic by profession. On the date of the incident, the 2nd Appellant came and informed that one Hakeem was looking for him. Hence, both the Appellant had left in a motorbike to meet Hakeem. Both had gone to an estate situated on Seemavelli Road. At the estate they had met person called ‘Massina’ the person informed that his services needed to fix a gun. He knew the person called ‘Massina’ used to go hunting with Hakeem. As no screwdriver was not available, the said person had gone to bring a screwdriver leaving two parcels. He did not open the parcels but waited until the other person brings screwdriver. At that time, police arrived and arrested the Appellants. After the arrest, the police had obtained his signature to a document which was in Sinhala Language.

The 2nd Appellant also narrated the same in his evidence. He too placed his signature to a document written in Sinhala Language.

The learned President’s Counsel argued that since the Appellants had referred to a person called Hakeem said to be the owner of the gun, the police had not carried out investigation with regard to Hakeem. Although, the 2nd Appellant had referred the name of Hakeem in his statement, the learned High Court Judge had stated in her judgment that no reference with regard to Hakeem was made in their statement. Due to this wrong inference, the learned President’s Counsel submits this has caused great prejudice to the Appellants and which deprived of a fair trial.

As this is a criminal trial the burden or obligation of proof of the guilt of the accused is placed squarely on the Crown. That burden rests upon the Crown in respect of every element or essential fact that makes up the offence charged. That burden never shifts to the accused. There is no obligation on the accused to prove any fact or issue that is in dispute. It is not for the accused to prove their innocence but for the Crown to prove their guilt.

A critical part of the criminal justice system is the presumption of innocence. What it means is that a person charged with a criminal offence is presumed to be innocent unless and until the Crown persuades a jury that the person is guilty beyond reasonable doubt.

In The Queen v. K.A. Santin Singho 65 NLR 447 the court held that:

“It is fundamental that the burden of proof is on the prosecution. Whether the evidence the prosecution relies on is direct or circumstantial, the burden is the same. This burden is not altered by the failure of the appellant to give evidence and explain the circumstances”.

In Miller v. Minister of Pensions (1947) 2 All E.R. 372 the court held that:

“...the evidence must reach the same degree of cogency as is required in a criminal case before an accused person is found guilty. That degree is well settled. It need not reach certainty, but it must carry high degree of probability. Proof beyond reasonable doubt does not mean proof beyond the shadow of a doubt. The law would fail to protect the community if it admitted fanciful possibilities to deflect the course of justice. If the evidence is so strong against a man as to leave only a remote possibility in his favour which can be dismissed with the sentence, “of course it is possible, but not in the least probable,” the case is proved beyond reasonable doubt, but nothing short of that will suffice”.

In The King Vs. W. P. Buckley 43 NLR 474, it was stated by Howard, C.J.:

“In arriving at a verdict of guilty, the majority of the jury must have viewed the evidence in sections accepted and convicted the appellant on those parts that were satisfactory and disregard those facts that pointed to the improbability of the story put forward by the Crown. The jury should have viewed the evidence as a whole. If they had done so, we are of opinion that they must have had a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the appellant. The verdict is in our opinion, unreasonable, in as much as taken as a whole the evidence does not support the conviction.”

The single most important criterion in evaluating the fairness of a trial is the observance of the principle of equality of arms between the defence and the prosecution. Equality of arms, which must be observed throughout the trial, means that both parties are treated in a manner which ensures their procedural equality during the course of the trial.

In this case PW1 and PW2 are the key witness. If their evidence is clear, cogent, and unambiguous the court could without any hesitation rely on their evidence and convict the Appellants in the absence of any corroboration. But due to reasons discussed above the evidence given by PW1 and PW2, in my view, has not passed the probability test. It is tainted with much ambiguity and uncertainty, which definitely affect the root of the case. Further, the prosecution has failed to call PW3, in my opinion he is a very essential witness in this case.

As the prosecution had failed its duty to prove this case beyond a reasonable doubt, I set aside the conviction and sentence imposed by the Learned High Court Judge of Puttalam dated 31/05/2023 on the Appellants. Therefore, they are acquitted from this case.

Accordingly, the appeal is allowed.

The Registrar is directed to send this judgment to the High Court of Puttalam along with the original case record.
